'Unholy Competition'

Money Scramble Deplored by MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal financial critic William Benidickson says there seems to be "an unseemly and unholy competition" among federal, provincial and municipal governments for money these days.

Pinning most of the blame on the federal government, he said Wednesday that various levels of government are freely using the "gimmick" of selling bonds with a non-taxable discount feature to lure money from investors. He said one recent federal issue offered a profit of 6.6 per cent to certain large investors.

He said only a budget disclosing federal government intentions for the next year will show whether the government "is concerned in a serious way about restraining inflation."

At some points in Mr. Benidickson's speech, Finance Minister Fleming interrupted to accuse him of making misleading and inaccurate statements about government bond yields.

The House approved $616,000,000 in government spending for April and May.
